DAVIS-CLARKSON.

The Engagement of Two Popular Young People Announced.

One of the very pleasing features of the reception and tea given by Mrs. W. B. Clarkson to Miss Annie Clarkson Saturday evening, was the announcement of the engagement of Miss Clarkson to Mr. Thomas Davis of Washington, D. C. The gentleman formerly resided here and was an attaché of the weather bureau. He was transferred to Washington, where he now holds an important position. The wedding is appointed for the first of March, and is being anticipated with much interest by the many friends of the young couple. During the afternoon a large number called to meet Miss Clarkson, who is an attractive young lady of a particularly striking type of beauty. She is the possessor of those traits making the ideal gentlewoman, and is admired by a host of friends for her many attractive qualities.

The receiving party was composed of the following: Mrs. W. B. Clarkson, Miss Annie Clarkson, Mrs. Susan A. Hartridge and Miss Jane McLeod. These were assisted by Mrs. W. B. Barnes, Mrs. C. M. Cooper, Mrs. W. B. Young, Mrs. William McFadden, Mrs. W. R. Rennie, Mrs. J. E. T. Bowden, Mrs. A. G. Hartridge, Miss Hattie Moody, Miss Mary Hatter, Mrs. Clifford Ross, Miss Alene Buckman, Miss Charlotte Phillips, Miss Caro Hallowes and Miss May Poage.

The Clarkson home was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the informality that reigned was a noticeable pleasure to those in attendance. The fair honoree was unusually pretty in a dainty gown of white silk, and carried an exquisite bouquet of white hyacinths. In the dining room the decorations consisted of narcissus, white hyacinths and the usual complement of green. In the center of the pretty table a cut glass bowl was filled with hyacinths, narcissus and ferns which were most artistically arranged. Serving at the table were Mrs. Rennie, Mrs. William B. Young, Mrs. Charles M. Cooper and Mrs. William McFadden, who were assisted by Miss Charlotte Phillips, Miss Annie Buckman and Miss Helen Willard. In an attractive corner of the spacious hall a delicious fruit lemonade was served by Mrs. J. E. T. Bowden. In the library hospitality was dispensed by Mrs. William D. Barnes. A table had been placed here filled with souvenirs of the occasion, which were heart-shaped boxes of candy, to which were attached by white ribbon the cards of Miss Clarkson and Mr. Davis. In this unique way the guests became apprised of the pleasant announcement, and much pleasurable excitement ensued for some time, during which the fair bride-to-be was showered with congratulations. Much of the pleasure of the occasion is due to Miss Jane McLeod and Miss Mary Hatter, who were most cordial in the reception of all the guests.—Jacksonville Metropolis.

What Happened to Kennedy.

If reports are true, J. P. Kennedy, the clever and big-hearted representative of the Armour Car Lines, was the victim of a bunco game in Jacksonville upon the occasion of his recent visit to that city.

Ordinarily Mr. Kennedy is a mighty shrewd fellow. He is one of the sort whose heart fills his entire bosom, and does not mind giving a man in hard lines a "boost," but he does object to being the victim of a bunco game.

Mr. Kennedy was seated in one of the fashionable restaurants of the Florida city. Simultaneously another man came in and occupied the same table. With that good nature and desire to be agreeable which has made him popular, Mr. Kennedy exchanged the compliments of the day and talked on matters of general interest. The waiter came and took the order, Mr. Kennedy being honored with the first opportunity.

"Make mine the same," remarked the stranger.

The stranger, notwithstanding that he chatted with his new-made friend freely, managed to finish his meal first, and retired. When Mr. Kennedy went to settle the bill he observed two checks.

"What are these for?" he asked the cashier.

"For yourself and friend, who just went out," was the reply.

"He was not my friend; I never saw the man before in my life."

"Well, he told me that you was his friend, and you must pay the bill," insisted the cashier.

Rather than have any misunderstanding over the matter Mr. Kennedy paid the bill and started out. Just as he was leaving the waiter called him and gave him a grip the stranger had forgotten, and after all this bunco game was "not so bad." Mr. Kennedy will remember the experience, however.

How Men Die.

More men die from worry than from overwork; more stuff themselves to death than die of starvation; more break their necks falling down the cellar stairs than climbing mountains.—G. H. Lorimer.

A TACTFUL GIRL.

The Way She Gave James a Lesson in Table Etiquette.

They were an engaged young couple and were having a quiet dinner while the band played alluring music. The girl was sweet and refined looking and the man big and strong. Her manners were perfect, but his left much to be desired as far as etiquette is concerned. After they had finished their meal an interested observer noticed that the big, wholesome man placed his knife and fork like the crossbones under the skull. With a blush the girl, whose own implements were placed correctly side by side, noticed the break.

"James," she said, with quick tact, looking all around among the tables, "did you ever notice that men and women eat differently? When a man finishes a meal he always places his knife and fork across each other, while a woman invariably places them side by side. It's funny, but I've often noticed it."

"Which is correct?" anxiously questioned her fiancé while he gingerly toyed with the objects of comment.

"Why, placing them side by side, dear, of course," she said. "But, then, men are so busy that I suppose they have no time for such details." And then she became interested in the band leader, while the erring James slyly adjusted his knife and fork according to regulations.

"There's a woman who is going to manage her husband without letting him know it," observed a sweet old lady who had overheard. "It all depends upon the way you do it whether you can get a man to come round."—Philadelphia Record.

MEN AND THEIR HAIR.

Peculiarities That Puzzle the Barber Who Notices Things.

The secretive, tactful barber was finally induced to talk. He remarked: "I've noticed one peculiarity about my customers that I could never quite explain—the less hair a man has the more attention he pays to it."

"There's a man who comes in here nearly every week for a hair cut, and if I shaved him clean from the back of his collar to his forehead you see on those shawls the women wear over their shoulders, but you'd think, to hear him, that he could braid it and do it up in coils. Wants me to be particular and trim it close on the neck and around the ears. I humor him, of course. I take a handful of somebody else's hair and sprinkle it on the cloth I put on him, and then I snip the air gently for ten or fifteen minutes and make a great ado when I whisk him off."

"And when he leaves the chair and says he mustn't let it grow so long again I say it was pretty long. I hope the Lord will forgive me. Nine out of every ten of the baldheads are that way, but men who've got plenty of hair will keep away from here until they look like edges of an old fashioned haystack. It's curious, and, as I said, I never could account for it."—Providence Journal.

Found a Cure for Indigestion.

I use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets for indigestion and find that they suit my case better than any dyspepsia remedy I have ever tried and I have used many different remedies. I am nearly fifty-one years of age and have suffered a great deal from indigestion. I can eat almost anything I want to now.—Geo. W. Emory, Reek Mills, Ala. For sale by all druggists.

The Sick Man and the Lawyer.

The sick man had called his lawyer. "I wish to explain again to you," said he weakly, "about willing my property."

The attorney held up his hand reassuringly. "There, there," said he. "Leave that all to me."

The sick man sighed resignedly. "I suppose I might as well," said he, turning upon his pillow; "you'll get it anyway."—Judge.

Why Johnny Ate Them.

Mrs. Billus (after the company had gone)—Johnny, you shouldn't have eaten those preserved fruits. They were not intended to be eaten. They were put on the table to fill up Johnny Billus—Well, that's what I used 'em for, mamma.
